He has concluded with "Green libraries are related to the overall green building movement, libraries have specific needs that raise some extra challenges for their preservation books must be kept away from sunlight as well as moisture and temperature change. Sunlight plays major role in green design, because it can be used to reduce the reliance on artificial lighting. Another challenge the library presents the weight of the books. A common strategy in green is to raise the floors to increase circulation, but the weight of the stacks can be an impediment to this strategy. To deal with this challenge, many designers have resorted to zoom the library into designated area. Libraries need to be built flexibly, in order to make room for expansions in size and in wiring capabilities. Library building is long term investments made to benefit the community so when designing them architects need to be looking so or 100 years into the future". Dr. P. M.
